Choosing the right school is an investment of time and resources for each family — and is one of the most important investment parents to make. While Montessori education is a commitment to your child's lifelong learning, there are many other factors to consider - ranging from school structure and resources for students to teaching-tudent relationships, and also the quality of teachers - and it is also important to understand taxes and taxes. I knew my son would be in a safe, nutritive and inspiring environment. Although George attended school only for a little more than six months I saw him grow in his independence and become his person. I am so grateful that my son has the opportunity to attend a school where his guides (teachers) are dedicated to investing in him. Our family loves the individualized approach and option for divelt is extremely important for me that George is exposed to other languages, cultures and andAnd that's exactly what you're getting, even in the children's class! If you are looking for a school for your child and want them to be seen as an individual I would definitely recommend Guidepost Montessori. I can't thank Guidepost enough for everything they do for our son. 01/01/2020 I regret taking my son to this school. Teachers when they are with children seem really busy and they really seem to worry. However, once out of class they seem pretty sad. Teacher turnover is like I've never seen anywhere. The administration is cold, and I don't really think they care about anything except your money. 10/12/2017 Wow, what a hidden gem! I can't believe how beautiful the structure is, and how hot and passionate teachers are.
